Carlson Labs Introduces Serrapeptase – The “Miracle” Enzyme

Arlington Heights, Ill. (February 9, 2017) – Serrapeptase has been widely used in Europe and Asia for nearly 30 years. It’s recognized for its ability to digest only certain proteins, providing our body with many important health benefits. Serrapeptase is a proteolytic enzyme, meaning it breaks protein down into smaller components, such as peptides and amino acids, that our body can use. Serrapeptase supports immune, cardiovascular, and digestive system health and promotes joint health.*

Serrapeptase is native to the silkworm’s digestive system, where it allows the silkworm to dissolve its own cocoon and become a moth—a process that’s performed quickly to protect the silkworm from predators. Within the human body, serrapeptase has the unique ability to bind itself to our blood plasma proteins, allowing it to reach areas of our body where it’s needed most.*

Each capsule of Carlson Serrapeptase provides 120,000 serrapeptase units (SPUs), delivered in timed-release vegetarian capsules. It’s also specially designed to survive the harsh trip through the stomach without the use of chemicals or coatings, so it can reach the intestines for optimal absorption. Support your body’s normal enzymatic activity with Carlson Serrapeptase.
